The Earl of Strafford, His Bride and "the Best Man."

To-day, at Grace Church, Mrs. Samuel J. Colgate, the wealthy widow, will become the Countess of Strafford. The Earl's best man will be Sydney Smith, the bride's younger brother. Owing to the Earl being in mourning, the ceremony will be quite simple.

ceremony of marriage of Mrs. Samuel J. Colgate to the Earl of Strafford is to be conducted by the Reverend Dr. Huntington to-day. The bride is a witty, graceful, wealthy American woman; the groom is the Earl of Strafford, the son of the late Earl of Strafford, who is in mourning for his first cousin, Princess Elvira, of Saxo-Wiemar.

Andrew W. Smith, the bride's brother, will accompany her to the chantry and give her to the Earl; Sydney Smith, the bride's younger brother, will be the Earl's best man.

In the decorations, in the gowns, and in the flowers there is to be nothing startling. In the reception, after the ceremony, in the home of Mrs. Alfred Kessler, the bride's sister, there is to be the same simplicity.

On Eugene Higgins's yacht, the Varuna, after a visit to Washington, the Earl and Countess of Strafford are to sail. The Earl of Strafford is sixty-seven years of age. He is tall, lithe, and dignified. His inheritance to the Earldom came to him at his eldest brother's death, in the beginning of this year. He was Colonel of the 1st Regiment of the Buffs, and has great wealth in lands. To his wife, the Queen will send the cashmere shawl and the autograph letter that are the usual gifts to the bride's parents.

Mrs. Colgate's first husband died four years ago, and left to his widow a fortune estimated at $10,000,000. She went to London, was presented at Court by Mr. Bayard and became a favorite in the fashionable society of England.

The Earl of Strafford was married in 1863 to Countess Henrietta, eldest daughter of Count Christian Darnley, Earl of Salisbury and niece of the first Marquis of Alington. He had four children by his first marriage. Two were sons who died before reaching their twenty-fifth year. One of his daughters was made of honor in ordinary to the Queen.

The Earl of Strafford is described as follows: "Out of a mural crown an arm embowed, grasping the colors of the Thirty-first Regiment, and pendant from the wrist by a chain the gold cross presented by royal command for Lord Strafford's valiant achievements, and on an escroll the word 'MORTUORI'."

CALL IN CONGRESS FOR WAR INQUIRY.

Mr. Sulzer Declares That Congress Alone Can Make a Fair Investigation.

NOT A POLITICAL MATTER. But as a Democrat He Voices the People's Demand for a Strict Inquiry.

Washington, Dec. 5.—Representative Sulzer acted on the Journal's recent editorial advice and to-day introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of the conduct of the war by the House Committee on Military Affairs. It was referred to that committee. The text of the resolution is:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs be and the same hereby is authorized and directed to investigate the war between Spain and the United States, and report all of said proceedings, conclusions and recommendations to the House of Representatives with all convenient speed.

That said committee is hereby authorized and empowered to send for books, documents, papers and persons, examine persons under oath, sit in any part of the United States, employ a stenographer and that the Sergeant-at-Arms be and he is directed to attend said committee and carry out its directions.

The necessary expenses of the investigation be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Mr. Sulzer said in introducing the Journal's editorial declaration that one of the duties of the Democratic party at this session of Congress is to urge a legislative investigation of the conduct of the war. It is obvious that the public has no faith in the white-washing commission which for some weeks has been touring the country and taking testimony for the ostensible purpose of discovering the responsibility for the blundering incompetence and cruelty which sent an invading army into a foreign country without adequate preparation and which resulted in the death of several thousand of the youth of this land.

"It is my desire to have the investigation conducted with a wish to do stern justice, and with no desire to create political capital."

SENATOR DAVIS HITS BACK AT SAGASTA.

The "Shame" Is Spain Has Been Allowed to Impose Her Abominable Yoke So Long.

SENATOR CUSHMAN K. DAVIS is concluding his twelfth year of service in the Senate and is regarded by Democrats and Republicans alike as one of the strongest, most scholarly and most honest men the United States Senate has seen for many years. The report of the Committee on Foreign Relations on the condition of Cuba was written by him, and by that report a declaration of war was made necessary.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—Senator Cushman K. Davis, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, whose sterling Americanism has given tone to the Peace Commission, dismissed to-day with a Journal reporter Sagasta's statement, which appeared in the Journal last week, and which was only published in the London papers yesterday. The Senator said:

"Sagasta's declaration is multipurpose. His specific accusation of spoliation on our part is senseless. We won our own possessions in a war provoked by Spain."

"We have been more than generous in Paris, just as we were too forbearing in Washington before the war. Giving liberty to oppressed peoples is no spoliation. No other nation would give Spain $200,000,000, or even twenty cents. The European nations, whose abstention Sagasta bewails, would have stultified themselves had they interfered."

"Sagasta says the work of our Commission is the 'greatest shame in history.' The 'shame' is that Spain has been permitted to keep her abominable yoke upon millions of our fellowmen so long. When Spain capped the climax of her historic shame by wholesale plunder, heartrending starvation and appalling murder in Cuba, the hitherto too sluggish conscience of our people was at length sufficiently aroused to put a stop to the most red-handed crime of this and, perhaps, of any other age."

"Sagasta threatened the revelations of the Red Book. They have no terrors for us. Granting liberty to Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, so far from being what the Spanish Minister calls the re-establishment of brute force, is one of the crowning works of the closing century."

GALLERY GODS IN FIERCE FIGHT.

Bowery Theatre in an Uproar While Five Sailors Were Being Ejected.

A free for all fight in the gallery of Miner's Bowery Theatre last night between five sailors, assisted by the gallery gods and five policemen, interrupted the performance on the stage for fifteen minutes and threw the entire theatre into an uproar.

One of the policemen had his coat torn from his back, another lost his helmet, while a third was cut and bruised in the back of his head. On the other contestants there were numerous cuts and bruises, and one sailor, who was arrested, was so out about the head that he had to be taken to Gouverneur Hospital to have wounds sewed up.

The wounded man who was arrested gave his name as the Eldridge Station as John Navarre, attached to the cruiser Minneapolis. There are two versions of the cause of the fight.

According to the police and Manager Clark of the theatre, Navarre and four companions went to the gallery with the avowed intention of disturbing the performance, which was a version of the Black Crook. They did so all the evening, and when the officers found them in the gallery they fought their way up through the aisles. The free use of night sticks cleared a passage way and Navarre was taken to the police station.

For a time a panic was feared. Women screamed and clung to their escorts, while men started to block the aisles.

The Christmas number of the Sunday Journal, out next Sunday, will be the triumph of newspaper making. Besides all the news, it will contain a twenty-four page magazine and three colored supplements, including one devoted entirely to beautiful reproductions of Tissot's pictures of Christ.

SENATOR KENNEY AGAIN ON TRIAL.

He is Accused of Conspiracy in the Looting of a Bank at Dover, Delaware.

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 5.—United States Senator Richard R. Kenney was to-day placed on trial in the United States Circuit Court for the second time, charged with aiding Cashier William N. Boggs in looting the First National Bank of Dover. On the first trial the jury disagreed. Boggs confessed to stealing $107,000 from the bank and implicated several citizens of Dover. Two of these are now in prison and Boggs is awaiting sentence. Senator Kenney is said to have been interested in stock deals with Boggs, for which the bank funds were used. Only one witness was called today, Harry A. Richardson, former president of the bank. The defence admitted that Senator Kenney gave several checks on the bank as mentioned in the indictment, and which resulted in the loss of the money. The trial will probably last a week.

PROF. ANDREWS MAY NOT GO.

His Resignation as Superintendent of Chicago's Public Schools Has Not Yet Been Opened.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—A strong effort is being made to induce Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews to withdraw his resignation as Superintendent of Chicago's public schools. The letter still rest in a pigeonhole in Clerk Graham's desk, unopened. It has not been read, probably in the hope that Dr. Andrews may change his mind. The fact that it has not been opened is the supposed reason that President Harris, of the School Board, and Mayor Harrison insist they have no official knowledge of Dr. Andrews's action.

"If Dr. Andrews makes an issue of the matter," said the Mayor to-day, "and comes to me, I will stand by him."

FRANK J. GOULD GETS A $10,000,000 BIRTHDAY GIFT.

Frank Jay Gould, of Age Yesterday.

It's rather worth while celebrating a one's twenty-first birthday when that event means the termination of a $10,000,000 trust in one's favor. Young Mr. Gould has experienced that felicity. He comes into the legacy bequeathed by his father and, what is more, is fully equipped by training to care for his fortune.

He Came of Age Yesterday and His Father's Legacy Is Out of Trust.

SAGE APPROVES OF HIM.

Vouches for the Young Man's Abilities for Managing a Big Fortune.

FRANK JAY GOULD is twenty-one years of age and invested with the little to his father's legacy since yesterday. He has $10,000,000.

He is tall, lithe, athletic. He has black hair, dark eyes, a feather-like black mustache. He likes exercise in the open air, bicycling, dogs.

He is reserved, but affable. He is laborious and joyful. At Lyndhurst, in the family mansion, his room is full of serious books about money, railways, banking, political economy, that he reads.

They do not make him severe. He can turn from them to anecdotes with amazing versatility. He is in the office of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, where he delivers in complicated reports, a patient workman, for five hours every day.

He is a financier, approved of, certified to and recommended by Russell Sage, by George Jay Gould, who was his guardian, and by others as interested as they in his education. George Jay Gould was his business guardian.

Miss Helen Gould was his guardian in manners. Her patriotism made him Chauvinistic. Her affability made him extremely considerate of others. He was fifteen years of age when his father died, and she took gravely Jay Gould's commission to her as a mentor. When a young man destined to be ten times a millionaire to be educated?

There were no manuals for the education of a millionaire heir; there were only manuals for the education of princes. Frank Jay Gould read, by his advice, Fenelon's "Telemaque," in French, because Fenelon had written it for the Dauphin. When a young man came to the passage where Ulysses's son, having hungered in Calypso's island, is thrown into the sea by Mentor, "What a difference in guardians!" he exclaimed.

Frank Jay Gould has the quality of reverence. At the Berkeley School, when a class mate said to him, "You have read 'Telemaque.' Don't say that out of doors; you'll be mobbed!" Frank Jay Gould was sincerely grieved. There are many delightful traits of that sort related of him.

He was a student in the University of the City of New York and has travelled a great deal. He owns Le Prince, La Princesse and Santa Monica, that are highly prized St. Bernard dogs. He has travelled his way from Philadelphia to New York on his bicycle in ten hours.

Russell Sage said yesterday: "I regard Frank Gould as a fine young man, indeed. He is modest and bright, to all his relations with him I have derived pleasure from the expressions of his character."

G. P. Morosini said: "Frank Gould is most sincere, resolute. He is an accomplished man of business."

INQUIRY INTO THE PORTLAND WRECK.

Representative Fitzgerald Wants the Character of Her Life Preservers Investigated.

Washington, Dec. 5.—Representative Fitzgerald, of Massachusetts, to-day introduced in the House a resolution instructing the Secretary of the Treasury to investigate the circumstances in connection with the recent disaster to the steamer Portland.

It directs him "to determine whether due care and vigilance were exercised in allowing her to proceed to sea on the evening of November 26, and to make particular inquiry in regard to the character of the life-boats, slugs, and life preservers used upon this steamer."

KINGS COUNTY IS FOR DEPEW?

Vanderbilt System Candidate Said to Be a Favorite Across the Bridge.

It became known in Brooklyn yesterday that the Republican Assemblymen and Senators in that borough had been pledged to support Depew for the United States Senate.

This action was taken at Lieutenant Governor Woodruff's secret meeting last Friday night.

WOMEN OF FASHION STARE AT HOBSON

Vanderbilts and Goulds Admire Him at a "Musical Morning."

QUITE OUTSHONE NORDICA

Merrimac Hero Bore a Galling Fire of Lorgnettes from Millionaire Matrons and Maids.

Hobson had a new experience yesterday. So did a large company of the most illustrious women in New York. Hobson's new experience was to undergo a raking fire from the eyes of these illustrious women—Vanderbilts, Goulds and the like.

Their new experience was to find themselves bestowing undivided attention upon a rather serious young man who probably never led a cotton in his life, and whose sole fortune is his monthly lieutenant's pay.

It happened at the Waldorf-Astoria, where Albert Morris Bagby gave one of his "musical mornings"—chaste celebrations at which women of fashion wear pretty frocks that could not be worn at a ball or dinner, rave over Bach, and compare notes on the delinquencies of ladies' maids. Hobson went there because he wished to hear Norden sing.

There were only a few men scattered through the ballroom, and they looked painfully insignificant as they slunk in a forest of ostrich plumes, heaped about with the richest hues of Autumn. The hero of the Merrimac was more fortunate, as he deserved to be. His place was in a box, and it happened to be the central box opposite the stage. He could not have hidden if he would.

It was not long after the assembling of the audience before the news of his presence was whispered about. With one accord the spectators faced about, casting their slits and nodding their feathers. Women of fashion have a frank way of doing such things. When there is something worth staring at they stare without subterfuge, without reserve. Lorgnettes were leveled at Hobson, not furtively, but in the deliberate, sweeping way in which machine guns are trained.

Mrs. George Gould treated herself to a long inspection of the hero. So did Miss Helen Gould, who was with her. So did Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. So did Mrs. Elliot F. Shepard, Mrs. Calvin S. Brice, Mrs. James Abernethy Burden, Miss Ward McAllister, the Countess de Launay, Villars, Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. Edwin Gould and many other matrons and maids whose patronymics are synonyms for untold gold.

Lieutenant Hobson bore his honors meekly. He did not bludge. He did not look abashed. He did not look pleased. He did not look worried. Some of the comments on his appearance—must have reached his ears; but he made no sign.

Nordica sang—sang sweetly and fervently, and responded to encores till she was tired. Hobson led the encores. And the women clapped when he did.
